

Search Guide to The Bell Index

The Bell Index is searchable by various terms, including subject, genre, author, year, and geographic origin of author and subject, when known. A term referring to any one of these categories may be entered in the “Search” box in order to retrieve citations for related articles or creative pieces from The Bell.

The Bell Index does not currently provide full-text versions of the contents of The Bell, but according to WorldCat, at least 89 libraries in North America, Ireland, the UK and Australia hold copies of the magazine in print or microfiche formats. Using the citation information provided by The Bell Index, you can pinpoint articles, essays, short stories, poems, and reviews that are relevant to your area of interest.

Listed below are the subject terms, genres, and geographic locations that have been catalogued in The Bell Index. If you are searching based on geographic location, you should try various searches based on country, city, and, within Ireland, county.

If you are searching for book reviews or art reviews based on the work of an individual writer or artist, you may enter the individual’s name in the “Search” box to retrieve a list of the relevant reviews that appeared in the pages of The Bell. A list of the individual names catalogued in The Bell index also appears below.
